Focus on FUCHS China, main sponsor of the F3 Asian Championships

After the success of the F3 Asian Championship Certified by FIA and the enormous excitement of the teams, the Asian promoter Top Speed, decided to organize the first edition of the F3 Asian Winter Series. The first of the three rounds of this series took place in January at the legendary Buriram International track in Thailand and was followed by two rounds at the iconic Sepang International circuit in Malaysia. This series makes perfect sense, giving the teams the opportunity to prepare for the F3 Asian Championship and drivers from all over the world a chance to test this new era of the single-chassis, single-engine regional F3. The opening rounds of this new Winter Series were a great success.

FUCHS China is the main sponsor of this Asian Winter

Series and also, for the second time in a row, the F3 Asian Championship. All the cars are sporting the FUCHS logo. As in 2018, the five rounds will be live-streamed internationally.

Eleven teams are registered in the international F3 Asian Championship Certified by FIA in 2019. They come from: China, Japan, America, Great Britain, India, the Philippines, Italy and Mexico. All the drivers will race with an Alfa Romeo. The ATM AR-F3R is a turbocharged 270hp, 4-cylinder with a capacity of 1742cc built into a Tatuus F3 chassis.

Enzo de la Vega: first tests with the Flembo team in Aragon

Newcomer to the Flembo team, 19-year-old Enzo de la Vega has great experience in the world of motorcycles. At 3, he experienced his first motorcycle ride on a Pw 50 and at 14, he participated in his first competitions on circuits. From then, he won several championships: French Cup Promosport 400, Challenge Yamaha R3 and the Ranch Valentino Rossi. He also took part in prestigious races such as the World Championship Moto Junior 3, the Bol d'Or (4th place) and the Red Bull MotoGP Rookies Cup. This season, Enzo joins the Flembo team alongside two other competitors involved in Supersport 300 and 600. With his Kawasaki Ninja 400, the French driver will compete, for the third year in a row, in the nine rounds of the World Supersport 300 Championship. The first winter tests will take place at the Aragon circuit in Spain.

“These trials will allow us to finalise the adjustments made this winter in the team workshops. A few weeks later, it's on this same track that I will run the first rounds of the 2019 World Cup.”

This highly competitive category brings impressive drivers from professional racing teams together. Despite some technical problems encountered during the 2018 season, Enzo raced in the top 15 of this world championship against 45 renowned drivers. “My goal is to enter the top 5 in 2019.” At more than 215 km/h on highly technical circuits, he will put his know-how and determination in front of intractable competitors with an unrivalled performance.

“We chose to sponsor Enzo de la Vega for the 2019 season for several reasons. First, this new headliner completes our brilliant FUCHS Silkolene motorcycle teams. He is young and has a very promising racing career ahead of him. This partnership is an excellent collaboration for him as well as for us. Second reason, he races in a world championship that is expanding rapidly, bringing together more and more top-level drivers and taking a truly international turn,” explained Dinis Cunha, FUCHS France Operational Marketing Manager.

Jordan Berfa in the starting blocks of the 2019 French Asphalt Championship

At the end of a 2018 season full of surprises but which ended with a very good victory in the Rallye Fenouillèdes, Jordan Berfa starts this year even more motivated driving his Hyundai i20R5. At 23, Jordan has proven himself on land rallies time and time again, notably by winning the 2017 French Earth Rally Championship title. In 2018, supported by the Turbo ABP Competition team composed of 12 people, he chose to switch categories and run on asphalt. He gained his first experience with drivers such as the French champions Yoann Bonato and Bryann Bouffier.

At the start of the 2019 season, with his mechanics, he made the last modifications to his race car before competing in his first rally of the season, the Rallye of Lyon-Charbonnières.

“The main improvements were on the rear suspension and the shock absorbers for a better handling of the car. Nevertheless, we do a complete check-up of the car before our first competition. Our 2018 participation in the asphalt rally has allowed us to progress and learn all rounds.”

After a transition season in the French Asphalt Rally Championship, Jordan and his co-driver Damien Augustin (32) will resume taking on new challenges. Even more enthusiastic than ever, they first hope to have their revenge at the rally Lyon-Charbonnières race, which they had to abandon in 2018.

Highly awaited by the public and their fans, the two riders of the Turbo ABP Competition team are preparing to have a thrilling season in this championship which is bitterly contested by leading teams.

The team is sponsored by FUCHS France for the second time in a row.

Alexandre Giroud, impressive at the Dakar 2019

For his third participation in the Dakar, quad rider Alexandre Giroud successfully won 4th place in the quad general standings. The 41st edition of this prestigious rally-raid took place in Peru over a particularly challenging 5,000 km with 70% of the race in the Peruvian deserts. Of the 334 drivers entered only 179 (75 bikes, 15 quads, 76 cars and 13 trucks) overcame all the difficulties of this international rally-raid and passed the finish line in Lima. As well as coming in 4th, Alexandre won a personal victory in a rally punctuated with pitfalls and trauma (injuring his ankle following a jump).

Alexandre Giroud defeats the 2019 quad driver winner

Facing the first three Argentinians who were leading the race – supported by professional teams and experienced in desert driving – Alexandre battled hard and clenched his teeth. “Between the dust, the sand and the competitors blocking the passage, the overtaking proved perilous and I had to take all the risks to pass them and progress. This year, the circuit through the dunes was particularly trying and tricky. I didn’t have any respite. It was necessary to be very focused on driving and avoiding quicksand and the fesh fesh. On the way back, it was even more complicated to find the right track. Although equipped with a road book and a GPS, it was difficult not to get disoriented following the tracks of other competitors and not to get bogged down in the sandy furrows of other vehicles while giving maximum power.” What a remarkable performance by Alexandre who defeated 2019 quad winner, Nicolas Cavigliasso, during the 8th stage. The French rider’s margin was slim: seven small seconds. But still!

This year, with the assistance of a mechanic, Alexandre was able to compete with a machine checked after each stage. “I am delighted with the performance of FUCHS Silkolene lubricants. Their quality has allowed us to overcome the mediocrity of the petrol imposed by the organizers and guaranteed to run with confidence. I refused the competing oils recommended by the organization!”

Belcar Endurance Series: both exciting and attractive

For the fourth season in a row, the McDonald's Racing team will run with a NORMA M20FC. Because the drivers won the Belcar title in 2017 and gained 3rd place overall in 2018, their ambitions could only be higher this season.

"I have succeeded for several years in my team with fast drivers and that will also be the case in 2019," said the well-known driver François Bouillon. He will race the full season in the Belcar Endurance Series with Marco Van Oppens, Koen De Wit, Kris Cools and occasionally with Frédéric Vervisch.

Future victories in this season will also need the skills of Koen De Wit. This famous competitor has proven himself in multiple disciplines over previous years. Where ever he races, his BMW M3 and M4 are always up front.

Competing with them is the talented Kris Cools, well known as the man who drove the Norma to 1st place several times in 2018. And finally, the racers will be joined by the brilliant Belgian driver Frédéric Vervisch who will always be there when his Audi international program will allow it. Frédéric will participate in the 24H of Zolder with the team.

The technical side, as previously mentioned, is provided by the Triple One professionals. The team consists of Team Chef Vincent Desschans and Data Engineer Frans Jacobs.

The Belcar Endurance Trophy in 2019 has six meetings, four of them at Zolder, one at Spa and a foreign trip to Assen in the Netherlands.

In 2018, this championship united more than 160 drivers in 40 teams from 19 different nationalities who drove on two different circuits. 75,000 spectators and 5,000 VIPs came to the six races to applaud the drivers and feel the adrenaline of each round. 8 TV channels relayed these sporting events while two million visitors followed the races online. More than 35,000 YouTube views were recorded.

Congratulations to Drew Bellerby for her 2018 award

At the 2018 season awards ceremony held in January, the awards committee chose FUCHS sponsored Drew Bellerby for an ‘Outstanding Performance Award’.

Selected because of her outstanding drive at the Pembrey circuit when she cut through the field from last position to finish 2nd in the final, a very surprised Drew was thrilled to be presented with the award. Drew, in only her second season competing in the BMW MINI Championship, finished her season with a total of 165 points, earning her 4th overall in this championship series. Drew has a new car ready and primed for the upcoming 2019 season,
